01. Ancient, Punch Marked Coinage, Gandhara Mahajanapada, (6th-5th Century BC), Bent Bar, Silver 1 Shatamana, 10.20 gms, 44.56x10.34 mm, Obverse: Two six-armed wheel symbol with orbs on each arm, Reverse: Uniface, Hardaker # Non Imperial Series, Group A, pg 56, very fine, very scarce. 01. Estimated Price - ₹3,000 – 3,500

02. Ancient, Archaic Punch Marked Coinage, Attributed to Gandhara Janapada, Silver 2 Shana or 1/4 Shatamana, 2.89 gms, 13.59 x 13.79 mm, "Local Swat Valley" type, Single 5 armed symbol on obv, a Very Rare denomination as compared to the larger Bent Bar, Five armed symbol instead of the usual six armed symbol. This type too is found only in the Swat valley. It is argued that the denomination and weights of this type are somewhat different and perhaps could be attributed to Kamboja Janapada?, punch with 5 arms instead of the regular issue of Gandhara, which always has 6 arms (Rajgor-561 to 567), said to be from a small hoard discovered about 12 years ago, An alternative attribution is that this is not Kamboja Janapada, and is instead a rare variety of Gandhara with a 5-armed symbol instead of 6-armed (Rajgor-561 to 567), The ancient Kingdom of Gandhara was one of the original sixteen Mahajanapadas ("Great Kingdoms") mentioned in ancient Buddhist texts like the Anguttara Nikaya. Gandhara, centered around the important ancient cities of Purushapura (modern Peshawar). Takshashila or Taxila, and Pushkalavati (the capital of the Kingdom) and covering the regions of northern Pakistan and eastern Afghanistan, though on occasions it extended as far as Kashmir, See Fishman, JONS 202, Fig. 5, Uniface, Unlisted, very fine, very rare. 02. 188. Hindu Medieval, Hindu Shahis of Kabul, Bhimadeva (c. 10th Century AD), Gold Unit, 4.33 gms, 17.53 mm, Obverse: A seated bearded person (king?) with long sigmoid tuft of hair, wearing a uttariya (stole) which runs across his shoulders and entwines his arms, seated cross-legged on throne, stretching his right hand forgiving out an indistinct object, towards a man clad in dhoti and standing to his right, with his hair in a bun, left hand of king akimbo and resting on thigh, symbols of Diamond and Trishul seen between the king and the man, legend above reading in Sharada script as 'brāhmaṇaśāhishribhīma deva', Letters 'go' and 'njo' between legs of throne, Reverse: Two persons seated on a high platform, with the person at right perhaps the king, with a peaked beard, sporting a sigmoid tuft, wearing the sacred thread and a neck ornament, clad in dhoti, seated in padmasana pose on a decorated seat, with right hand raised and palm open inwards, while left hand, akimbo, rests on thigh, to the right of the king is a lady seated cross-legged, her right hand akimbo and resting on thigh and in her left hand holds a long stalk of a flower or a sash, legend above reading in Sharada script as 'śrītyaṅgaṇadeviśrisāmanta deva', This coin is one of the enigmatic gold issues of early medieval India. As is clear from the coin's legend, this coin was issued by the Hindu Shahi ruler Bhimadeva who was a Brahmin. Kalhana, the author of Rajatarangini, mentions that king Bhima lived in the city of Udabhāṇḍa and that he is the predecessor of king Jayapala. As pointed out by Bhandare, the Shaivite trident seen on the obverse suggests the king's Shaivite affinity which is further corroborated by Jayapala's Hund inscription. Al-Biruni's Tarikh al-Hind also sheds some light on the Hindu Shahi rulers including Bhimadeva, Reference: Gold Coins of the Hindu Shahi King Bhimadeva, JONS 255, Shailendra Bhandare, very fine, extremely rare with only few pieces known.

Gold Coins of the Hindu Śāhi King Bhīmadeva

Shailendra Bhandare

Abstract This paper discusses a type of pre-Islamic medieval Indian gold coinage, attributed to the Hindu Śāhi (Shahi) king Bhīmadeva, that was published several decades ago but forgotten in the discourse. It brings forth five other specimens of the type and the discussion offers new readings of the legends and new interpretations of the iconography, contextualizing these features with epigraphic, numismatic and historic details. It also underlines the importance of this type for the Hindu Śāhi chronology.

In 1952 Ajit Ghose published a gold coin attributed to the Hindu Shahi dynasty, weighing 68 grains (4.04 g) (Ghose (1952), figure 1).

The coin is unique in terms of design as it shows two human figures on both sides. Ghose correctly identified the issuer of the coin as ‘Bhīma Deva of the dynasty of Śāhi Hindu kings of Kabul’ on the basis of the obverse legend. Presumably, the figure of the seated king on obverse and reverse is Bhīmadeva. However, by his own admission, Ghose found the reverse legend to present ‘considerable difficulty’ in reading. The reading he published was by C Sivaramamurti, the curator of the archaeological section of the Indian Museum at Calcutta (Kolkata). Sivaramamurti also suggested that the letter ‘go’ under the king’s throne stood for gopta, meaning ‘king protector’.

Ghose noted that the reading śrīmad guṇanidhi śrī sāmanta deva presented a conundrum inasmuch as it referred to another ruler, Sāmantadeva, alongside Bhīmadeva and therefore needed an explanation as to why the names of two issuers would appear on the same coin. Ghose’s answer to this was a conjecture. He suggested that the coin was issued by Bhīmadeva ‘probably to commemorate his accession’ and its purpose was ‘for distribution as largesse among the Brahmins’. Ghose contended that the mention of ‘Sāmantadeva’ as guṇanidhi, or ‘the fortunate one, the embodiment of all virtues’, suggested he had still been alive when the coin was issued. Ghose thus suggested that the coin was issued by Bhīmadeva when ‘Sāmantadeva’ had abdicated in favour of Bhīmadeva to facilitate the latter’s accession.

Irrespective of its uniqueness, the coin was largely forgotten. Monographs dealing with north Indian medieval coins, such as Gopal (1966) or Roy’s (1980) do not make a reference to it. It does not find a mention in Mitchiner (1979).

Deyell’s seminal contribution Living Without Silver makes no mention of it, in spite of having a chapter dedicated to the Shahi coinage (1990, 51–60) and Mishra (1972) has no reference to the coin.

But there are exceptions to these oversights. The coin does find a fleeting mention in MacDowall’s landmark article on the Shahi coinage (1968). Pandey (1973, 181, 190 and 218) discusses it briefly in his book and remarks on the similarity of the seated figures on it with the ‘King and Queen on Couch’-type coins of the Gupta emperor, Chandra Gupta II. In the catalogue section (218) he also proposes a different reading of the reverse legend from Sivaramamurti’s. He reads it as śrī mada-(gata)-sāmantadeva. Rehman (1979, 205–6) describes the coin by reproducing Ghose’s description verbatim. However, he further comments,

Obv: Within circular border of minute dots, King, bearded and with long hair, wearing dhoti (loincloth) and uttariya (upper garment or scarf) worn as if it were the Jajñapavita (sacred thread), seated cross-legged on throne, holding out his right hand for giving out or receiving an indistinct object, towards a person who is probably a female attendant standing to the right, with her hair dressed in a long coif; left hand of king akimbo and resting on thigh.

Symbols: Trisula (trident), a diamond-shaped symbol, and other indistinguishable symbols or characters between King and the right-hand figure, and above head of latter.

It is evident that the motifs of the goddess Lakṣmi and the king-on-throne do not fit into the general pattern of the Hindu Śāhi coins. The attribution of this coin to Bhīma therefore solely rests on the reading of the obverse legend. But unfortunately, the letter Bha, in the name Bhīma, is obliterated and can only be conjecturally restored. The reverse legend is even more confused and difficult to read. C. Sivaramamurti's reading as given above may only be accepted with strong reservations, for much of it is based on conjectural reconstruction. The style of writing however agrees well with the tenth century Sarada characters.

The most recent reference to this gold coin is by Ziad (2022, 165–7). He deploys the coin in two ways; one, in a comparative context, to comment on an image of a 'seated figure' on one of the coin types he discusses, and two, to suggest a chronological marker for coins with the legend 'Sāmantadeva'. Ziad argues that the seated figure on a type of copper coins he discusses 'is undoubtedly derived from the gold coin'. For his second intervention, he borrows the description of the coin largely from Ghose. He regards the gold coin as 'an issue of Bhīmadeva and Sāmantadeva', suggesting it to be a joint issue, but proposes a different chronology. Ziad accepts Ghose's view that the titles preceding the name 'Sāmantadeva' indicate he must have been alive at the time when the gold coin was issued. However, his position is the opposite to that of Ghose. Ghose regards Sāmantadeva as a predecessor of Bhīma, while Ziad argues that he must have been his successor. Ziad further suggests that the Śāhi ruler Jayapala should be identified as the 'Sāmantadeva' mentioned on this gold coin.

To sum up these views,

- 1 Both Rehman and Ziad accept the readings of the obverse and reverse legends as given by Ghose without questioning. However, Pandey offers a different reading for the reverse legend and Rehman offers a caution.
- 2 They all consider Śāhi Bhīmadeva to be the main issuer of the gold coin.
- 3 They regard the mention of 'Sāmantadeva' as that of another ruler and offer different views as to who he might have been.
- 4 They take the legend immediately preceding the name 'Sāmantadeva' to be a title or epithet.
- 5 They do not question Ghose's identification of the motifs; the female figure shown seated with the king on the reverse is taken to represent goddess Lakṣmī seated in padmāsana (the lotus position).
- 6 The figure accompanying the king on the obverse, which Ghose described as 'probably a female attendant standing to the right, with her hair dressed in a long coif', is largely left out of discussions, barring a remark by Pandey who merely says that the second figure on both sides of the coin is female.
- 7 The discussion about the relationship between the figures and the legends on the coin is largely speculative. All authors after Ghose take the readings given in his paper as the basis of their arguments, focusing on the names of Bhīmadeva and Sāmantadeva. Ghose takes the mention to commemorate Sāmantadeva's abdication; Pandey takes it to be a 'memorial' for Sāmantadeva as a victor against Islamic invasions and Ziad suggests 'Sāmantadeva' to be the same as Bhīmadeva's successor Jayapala.

It is therefore clear that Ghose's publication and in particular the reading of the legends he gives, serves as a benchmark for further discussions despite the fact that they are far from certain. There has been no reassessment of what Ghose published; conceivably this is because Ghose only supplied a rather small and poor-quality image of the coin. I attempt to remedy this shortcoming by publishing five more examples of the same type.

The first two are in private collections in India and weigh 4.42 and 4.35 g respectively. The other three were documented in trade, one nearly four years ago, and two have turned up recently on the market, said to have been found in Himachal Pradesh. Perhaps one or two more specimens were also a part of this recent group; however, I have not been able to get pictures of all, and one coin in the trade group (figure 4) weighs 4.38 g, but the weights of other coins in the group are not known. Collectively, these coins help throw a fresh light on the coin published by Ghose almost 70 years ago.

The first aspect that becomes clear after comparing the four coins is that while they are evidently of the same type and have the same legends, there is a considerable variation in their execution and detail. They are all struck using different pairs of dies. Let us see what the depictions are and how they compare by taking the obverse and reverse designs separately.

Obverse design

The basic obverse motif on all coins is the same. It consists of two figures, one seated and the other standing and both are male (Ghose suggests the standing figure to be a female; however, this is clearly not the case). There are no aspects of female anatomy seen on this figure). The seated man sits cross-legged on a flat-topped, low seat that has cone-shaped legs, in an almost frontal pose. He does not appear to wear any headgear and his hair is shown to end in a sigmoid tuft behind his head. The way this is shown is a bit clumsy, owing to the perspective of the frontal figure. He sports a moustache and a pointed beard, a neck ornament and a sacred thread that runs across from his left shoulder. In a stylized manner, he is also shown to wear a stole or uttariya, which runs across his shoulders and entwines his arms. On the coin in figure 2 the tasselled end of this stole is seen hanging by the man's left arm. The execution of this feature is different on the coins in figures 3 and 4 where there is no tassel visible. The man rests his left hand on his left thigh and his right hand stretches out towards the standing man. With the arm flexed at the elbow and the palm spread wide (seen clearly in figure 3), this is undoubtedly the 'gesture of benevolence' or 'gifting' (varadamudrā or dānamudrā).

The standing man is in a three-quarter profile. His hair is tied in a bun behind the head and he has no facial hair. He is shown bare-bodied and on the coin in figure 2, a neck ornament is clearly visible. He is clad in a dhoti, and in figure 2 the tie and folds of the garment are visible between his legs. The end of the tie is rendered in a manner similar to the end of the tassel on stole the seated man wears. The man has both his hands spread out; in figure 2 there is an indication that he might be holding a vessel, but in figures 3 and 4, his hands appear cusped into an añjali mudrā or gesture of supplication. The cusped hand or vessel is right below the outstretched hand of the seated man, so it is very clear that the seated man is making an offering to the standing man. The relative sizes of the figures suggest that the seated man is of a higher status than the standing man.

Ghose remarked that there are 'indistinguishable symbols or characters' between the two figures. In fact, there are both, but let us only discuss symbols here (I will return to the 'characters'/letters below when we discuss inscriptions). On all three coins shown here, there is a trident or triśūla seen to the left of the seated figure. This is a typical Shaivite trident, with no staff or handle but only a globular base from which emanate its three constituent prongs or blades. The central blade is upright but the blades flanking it are curved and turn downwards midway. To the immediate left of the trident (and to the right of the standing figure) there is another object or symbol; on the coins in figures 1 and 2, it is a 'cross' but on the coin in figure 3 it is a diamond shape.

Much like the obverse, the basic design of the reverse is the same on all four coins; there are two human figures, both seated. However, there are a number of differences in the depiction here when it comes to details. The most noticeable difference is that on Ghose's coin the two figures are seated on different seats. The figure on the right sits on a platform-like seat, which is embellished with a criss-cross pattern, with empty spaces in between filled with clusters of small dots. This figure, evidently of a man, sits in what Ghose regards as 'kingly pose', where the right leg is flexed at the knee and pulled close to the body while the left leg hangs loose, in front of the platform seat. The figure to the left, identified by Ghose and others as the goddess Lakṣmī, sits on a separate seat. The details are not clearly visible in the photograph supplied by Ghose, but he describes it as a 'lotus seat'. However, on the three other coins published here this depiction differs. On these coins, we see that the two figures are seated on the same seat; it has the same platform-like design but with different decoration. Here instead of a criss-cross pattern, we see a row of small stud-like features. It is not clear if the platform has legs, but considering the platform on Ghose's coin does not, it is plausible to suggest that the one seen here is also without legs. The figure of the man sits with both legs flexed and drawn close to his body and not in a 'kingly pose' as seen on Ghose's coin.

Barring this difference, the man seated on the right is executed in a manner very similar to the one on the obverse. He sports the same 'sigmoid tuft' hairstyle and has a moustache and a pointed beard. He wears the sacred thread and a neck ornament (on the coin in figure 2 this is seen to be a string of beads). The stole or uttariya is also seen over his shoulders but it is depicted in a less emphasized manner. There are also differences in the way he gesticulates. On Ghose's coin in figure 1 and on the coins in figures 3 and 4, his right hand is held in front of his face, bending backwards. But on the coin in figure 2, he is shown holding a flower (lotus?) bud with a long stalk in his right hand. His left hand is shown resting akimbo on his thigh on all the coins.

The figure that sits to the right is evidently that of a female. On all the coins her breasts are clearly visible. She sits in a semi-cross-legged manner. Her left leg is flexed at the knee and drawn closer to her body on the platform seat but her right leg hangs down, although not fully. She wears a veil, which is suggested by a wavy line that runs behind her body and joins her head with a dot, which in all likelihood represents a crest ornament. Her hair is tied in a bun behind her head. There is a suggestion that she is wearing a sari; a decorative tassel is shown hanging close to her left knee and it is most likely the end of the tuck of a sari-like garment. She rests her right hand akimbo on her thigh on all coins; however, there are salient differences in what she holds in her left hand. On coins in figures 1, 3 and 4 she holds an object of an uncertain nature. It could well be a floating end of a sash-like textile, or a flower with a long stalk. But on the coin in figure 2 she is depicted holding a small, thin stick. If the object is a sash, the intention is perhaps to show that she is fanning the man seated to right with it. The small stick is most likely a pin, used to apply kohl.

Much like the obverse depiction, it is evident that there is a difference of status between the two figures, the man being of a higher status than the woman. Also, as on the obverse, the relationship between the two figures is suggested here by their gestures and objects that they hold. On the coins in figures 1, 3 and 4, the man sits at leisure, with his hand turned inwards near his face and probably resting on or under his chin, while the woman fans him. In case of the coin in figure 2, he is offering her a flower while she applies kohl. These contexts clearly outline the fact that the seated female is in no way divine, but a human representation. Ghose's identification of the female as 'goddess Lakshmi' therefore needs to be revised. It is also evident that the two figures are shown here in a relational context, most likely as a husband and wife.

Inscriptions on the coins

Obverse inscriptions

The clue to the identity of these figures is provided by the inscriptions. Ghose's collaborators read the obverse inscription as śāhi shri bhīma deva; this indeed confirms the issuer of the coin to be the Hindu Shahi ruler Bhīmadeva (about AD 921–64). The doubts about the letter 'bha' and in general about the accuracy of Ghose's report of the obverse legend that Rehman had voiced (see above) can be put to rest after comparing all four coins shown here. The letter 'bha' is particularly clear on the coin in figure 3.

While the obverse legend was reported by Ghose to be śāhi shri bhīma deva, he correctly noted that just below the legend there were additional 'symbols or characters', i.e. letters. As we have seen above the symbols are a diamond / cross and a Shaivite triśūla mark. Perhaps Ghose's collaborators in this regard did not get a chance to see a clear photograph of the coin and they missed what the letters were. However, the three additional coins published here help us to read them. There are three letters in Sarada script here and they are brāhma ṇa. The full legend on the obverse is therefore brāhmaṇa śāhi shri bhīma deva (figure 9).

Below the seat on which the man sits, there is a letter 'go', which as we saw above, Sivaramamurti suggested to stand for gopta, or 'king protector'. However, the three other coins published here show that this is not the only letter in the lower field. To the left of 'go', there is another letter, which is undoubtedly a compound letter. Judging by what is visible on coins in figures 2 and 3, I would venture a suggestion that this letter is 'njo' or 'ndho'. What these two letters precisely indicate is a mystery at the moment. To suggest they stand as shortened forms for any words would be too speculative, to say the least.

Reverse inscriptions

The inscription on the reverse of the coin, as Ghose has admitted, is 'considerably difficult' to read and thus he sought C. Sivaramamurti's help. Rehman remarked that 'the reverse legend is even more confused and difficult to read'. This was primarily because the quality of the illustration provided by Ghose was poor. However, with the three new coins being published here this task has become somewhat simpler, but as we shall see, not fully so. As we have seen, Sivaramamurti's reading of the reverse legend was shrimad gunanidhi shri sāmanta deva whereas Pandey's version was shri mada-(gata)-sāmantadeva. The three additional coins published here make it very clear that these are not the correct readings of the legend. While the last six letters do appear to be śrī sāmanta deva, the first six need a thorough revisit.

The first of the six letters is a śrī. The second and the third are compound letters. The first of these is a 'ta' or 'na', compounded with a 'ya' as characterized by the sigmoid lower part. So, this can be read as 'tya' or 'nya'. The third letter is a compound of the nasal consonant 'n' and 'ga', which is joined to the former letter at its base. The fourth is another nasal consonant 'ṇa'. The last two letters are evidently 'de' and 'vi'. Collectively this gives us the name śrī tyāṅgaṇadevi or shri nyaṅgaṇadevi.

A precise reading of the second letter of the legend would no doubt inform us on which of the two readings is correct. However, in view of the current state of affairs on Śāradā script palaeography, I am unable to make a call on the reading. The form closest to this compound letter that I could find is seen in the 'Mahārajñi Shrī Kameśvaridevi' inscription, said to have been found at Hund (Sahni 1933–4 and Khaw 2016). The inscription records the construction of a devakula or 'statue shrine/temple' by a queen named Kāmeśvari Devi. It mentions a Brahmin named Pillaka, the son of of Vīrāditya, who was the head of the 'assembly of five' that managed the temple. The word vīrāditya is split between lines 3 and 4 of this inscription, and the letter 'tya' that one sees at the beginning of line 4 (figure 11) is the closest match to the second letter in the coin legend here. It is conceivable, therefore, that the name on the coin is more likely to be śrī tyāṅgaṇadevi.

Interpretation of the devices in light of the new readings

Previous researchers have relied heavily on the readings of the legends on this type of coins to suggest the identification of the figures and to comment on the relative chronology and circumstances of its issue. We will see how the reading of obverse and reverse legends presented here alters and adds to some of these views.

The obverse

The legend brāhmaṇa śāhi śrī bhīma deva makes it amply clear that the king who issued the coins was Bhīmadeva, ‘the Brahmin’. The historicity of Bhīmadeva is ascertained through two important textual sources, the historical account Tārikh al-Hind of the Islamic savant al-Biruni and the Sanskrit text Rājatarangini, the chronicle of Kashmir by Kalhana. Apart from these two sources, select inscriptions in the Sanskrit language and Śāradā script, recorded from various parts of the Greater Gandhāra region, provide further information on Bhīmadeva.

Al-Biruni’s Tarikh al-Hind has the following information about the Hindu Shahi dynasty

The last king of this race [the Turk Shahis] was Lagaturman, and his Vazir was Kallar, a Brahman. The latter had been fortunate, in so far as he had found by accident hidden treasures, which gave him much influence and power. In consequence, the last king of this Tibetan house, after it had held the royal power for so long a period, let it by degrees slip from his hands. Besides, Lagaturman had bad manners and a worse behaviour, on account of which people complained of him greatly to the Vazir. Now the Vazir put him in chains and imprisoned him for correction, but then he himself found ruling sweet, his riches enabled him to carry out his plans, and so he occupied the royal throne. After him, ruled the Brahman kings Samand (Sāmanta), Kamalu, Bhim (Bhīma), Jaipal (Jayapala), Anandapala, Tarojanapala (Trilocanapala). The latter was killed AH. 412 (A.D. 1021), and his son Bhīmapala five years later (A.D. 1026). This Hindu Shahiya dynasty is now extinct, and of the whole house there is no longer the slightest remnant in existence. (trs Sachau 1910, vol. 2, 13)

Kalhana’s Rājatarangini mentions that the Shahi king Bhīma lived in the city of Udabhāṇḍa (Stein 1900, vol. 1, 352). Kalhana also identifies Bhīma as the predecessor of the king Jayapāla and the maternal grandfather of the Kashmiri Queen Diddā (Stein 1900, vol. 1, 249). Bhīma’s daughter was married to Simharāja, the father of Diddā. Diddā in turn was married to Kśemagupta, the king of Kashmir.

The most interesting aspect of the obverse legend is the occurrence of the word brāhmaṇa as an appellation for śāhi śrī bhīmadeva. Al-Biruni clearly mentions that the progenitor of the Hindu Śāhi dynasty Kallar was a Brahmin. In spite of this reference, there has been considerable debate about the Śāhis being Brahmins. The debate is summarized by Pandey (1973, 87–90) who offers a view that the Śāhis were ‘Brahma-Kshatriyas, or Brahmanas who discarded their priestly profession for martial pursuits’. Be that as it may, the mention on the coin certainly draws a line under the debate about the varṇa (caste) system of the Śāhi rulers. Some features of the seated figure, evidently of Bhīmadeva, also support this identity. The king wears the sacred thread and the ‘sigmoid tuft’ at the back of his head is very likely the rendering of a Brahmin śikhā or an extended lock of hair.

The second aspect, missed by Ghose and, following him, all others, is the presence of a Shaivite trident between the two figures. As we have seen the second figure on the obverse is that of a man who is receiving a dāna or ritual gift from the king. The trident might suggest that this man is a Shaivite priest or preceptor. Bhīmadeva’s Shaivite leanings are referred to in the Hund inscription of his successor Jayapala (Khaw 2016, 119, no. 3.5.15), which records the dedication of a Śiva temple by Changulavarman, who was most likely an official in Jayapala’s government. Verses 7 and 8 of the inscription are,

*tatrāsīd bhūbhṛtām mukhyo Bhīmo bhīma-parākramaḥ
nirjītya para-sainyāni yena saṅgrakṣitā mahī
Bhīmenāpi svadagdhasya sambhavo ’sti Pinākina
saṅkalpa-yones saṅkalpān, na tu bhīmena vairiṇā*

The first two lines translate as ‘therein [i.e. in the city of Udabhandrapura, the Śāhi capital which is described in preceding verses] dwelt the chief of kings Bhīma, of terrible valour [or, with valour like that of Bhīma, the legendary hero], by whom, having conquered his enemies’ troops, the earth was protected’. The second verse makes an intriguing reference that ‘even though Bhīma burned himself, there is rebirth for him through Pinakin [= Shiva]’. This hints at a possibility that Bhīma ended his life through a ritual suicide prescribed in Shaivism. This reference undoubtedly underlines Bhīma’s connections with Shaivism. It is therefore perfectly justified that he chose himself to be depicted as a patron of a Shaivite Āchārya or preceptor.

The reverse

Ghose and, following him, Ziad took the portion read as śrīmad guṇanidhi on the reverse of the coin as an adjective for the words following it (sāmantadeva) and implied that this meant Sāmantadeva was alive when the coin was issued. They take the reverse legend and device to suggest a sort of commemoration through which Bhīmadeva acknowledged the role played by Sāmantadeva in his own rise to kingship. Ghose suggested an abdication by Sāmantadeva that facilitated Bhīmadeva’s coronation, while Ziad suggests Sāmantadeva to be a successor of Bhīmadeva. Pandey, while offering a different reading than that of Ghose, also suggested that the mention of ‘Sāmanta Deva’ was a commemorative one (1973, 95). In his view it referred to the role played by Sāmantadeva in successfully repelling an Islamic invasion.

The reading on the three new coins shows that the first word on the reverse is not śrīmad guṇanidhi as reported by Ghose or śrī mada-(gata)-sāmantadeva as read by Pandey. Instead, it is śrī tyāṅgaṇadevi.

This is evidently not an adjective for the word śrī sāmantadeva which follows it because it is a feminine noun. It must therefore refer to the female figure seen in the motif on the coin. We have already seen why this figure cannot be identified as a divine representation of Lakṣmī, as was suggested by Ghose and others. The only way a legend in the feminine nominative case could be explained is by taking it as the label for the female figure on the coin. Therefore, śrī tyāṅgaṇadevi should be taken as the name of the female figure that sits to the right of the male figure. Once this is accepted, it would follow that the male figure should be considered as a representation of none other than ‘Sāmantadeva’, whose name appears in the remainder of the legend.

The only question that now remains is how these figures are related to the figure on the obverse, the issuer of the coin, Bhīmadeva. It is logical to assume that they represent his father and mother. It is noteworthy that both names in the legend are preceded by the honorific śrī, meaning ‘illustrious’, thus suggesting that they are references to the individual figures that are considered to be illustrious. It is also evident from the gestures of the two figures that they are to be taken as a ‘husband and wife’ depiction; the actions of the woman to fan the man with her garment and the man to present a flower to the woman while she applies kohl, are both indicative of such a relationship.

This opens up the wider debate about Śāhi chronology and the order of rulers. Previous researchers, including MacDowall, Pandey, Yogendra Mishra, Rehman, Deyell and Ziad, have all offered their views on this issue. The two textual sources, namely al-Biruni and Kalhana have played an important role in the debate and so has the numismatic evidence, first systematically assessed by MacDowall. However, the main problem in mapping the textual and numismatic components of evidence is the fact that both sets of evidence present different names of Śāhi kings. According to al-Biruni, the founder of the dynasty was a Brahmin named Kallar, while Kalhana names Lalliya Śāhi as the first Śāhi king. Al-Biruni mentions the names ‘Samand’ and ‘Kamalu’ as successors of Kallar and predecessors of ‘Bhim’. Kalhana makes a reference to ‘a rebellious Śāhi’ after Lalliya, and then to ‘Kamaluka Toramana’ as a predecessor of ‘Bhīma Śāhi’. On coins, we have a different set of names, Spalapati Deva, Sāmantadeva, Bhīmadeva and Khudavayaka or Khudarayaka, all of whom issue silver coins of a single type, the ‘bull and horseman’ type that later becomes ubiquitous in north India. Alongside these, a subsidiary series of copper coins of ‘elephant and lion’ type also exists but here we have the names of Spalapatideva, Sāmantadeva and Vakkadeva. Some of these subsets have overlaps. Ostensibly ‘Samand’ of al-Biruni is the same as ‘Sāmanta’ of coins, and ‘Kamalu’ of al-Biruni could well be ‘Kamaluka’ of Kalhana.

In the two accounts of the history of the Śāhis, namely the works of Mishra (1972) and Pandey (1973), we see different accounts and explanations given in order to make sense between textual and numismatic evidence. Mishra takes the view that Spalapati, Sāmanta and Vakka are all ‘numismatic names’ of Kallar, the founder of the dynasty (1972, 19–22). He also proposes that Kallar of al-Biruni is identical to Lalliya of Kalhana. He regards al-Biruni’s Kamalu or Kalhana’s Kamaluka-Toramana as the immediate successor of Lalliya/Kallar and suggests that Samand or Sāmantadeva usurped Kamalu’s throne for a while. Mishra identifies Sāmanta to be the ‘rebellious Shahi’ mentioned by Kalhana. Kamalu/Kamaluka then regains the Shahi throne and strikes coins with the legend ‘Khudavayaka’. He is then succeeded by Bhīma.

Pandey, on the other hand, took Spalapati to be a separate king and proposed that he succeeded Kallar (1973, 77–95). Kallar was followed by ‘Sāmantadeva’, who in Pandey’s view had two reigns, one in which he issued coins with legend ending in a visarga, ḥ (= devaḥ) and the other, where the visarga was dropped (= deva). In between these two reigns, ‘Khudavayaka’ a Muslim usurper nudged Sāmanta out for a short while and struck his own coins. Pandey puts Lalliya as a successor of Sāmanta and Kamalavarman or Kamalu or Kamaluka as a successor of Lalliya. Kamaluka’s son was Bhīmadeva (ibid.). As we have seen above, Pandey briefly mentions the gold coin published by Ghose in this context and suggests that the image of Sāmantadeva on it was Bhīma’s way to commemorate him for his victory over the Muslims.

Rehman was next to offer views on the Shahi succession (1976, 89–120). He rightly criticizes the views of both Mishra and Pandey, particularly in light of a large body of evidence gathered from Islamic texts. Rehman places Kallar at the head of the dynasty, followed by Sāmantadeva. According to him the coins with legend ‘Khudarayaka’ were struck by an Islamic intruder Y’aqub bin Laith who ejected Sāmanta in the Kabul valley and forced the Shahis to move their capital to Udabhandapura on the River Indus. Here, Lalliya succeeded Sāmanta, to be followed by Kamaluka/Toramana or Kamalu or Kamalavarman. Bhīmadeva was his successor.

The common ground that all three authors, Mishra, Pandey and Rehman, take is to regard Kamalu/Kamaluka/Kamalavarman as the father and predecessor of Bhīmadeva. The evidential basis for this is not only the order of kings mentioned by al-Biruni but also a broken Śāradā inscription found at Dewai, where Bhīmadeva is mentioned as śrī kala[ka]. . . lavarmodbhava (Sahni 1931–2 and Khaw 2016, 111–12). The lacuna was expanded to [śrī]-kala[ka]/[ma] lavarmodbhava, which means ‘sprung from the illustrious Kala Kamalavarman’ (kala kamalavarman + udbhava) (Sircar 1983, 430). However, this epigraphic mention is not very reliable because it is in a bad state of preservation and the precise contents of the inscription are beyond anyone’s guess.

As will be evident from the foregoing discussion that the position of most historians working on the Śāhi chronology is to place Sāmantadeva at least a few generations before Bhīmadeva. Going by their individual views and arguments, the dates they propose for Sāmantadeva are also different. Rehman dates him to AD 850–70, Mishra to AD 895–902 and Pandey to AD 869–70 and AD 872–82 (since he suggests Sāmantadeva had two reigns). In comparison, the dates they propose for Bhīmadeva are ‘stable’ and close (Rehman AD 921–64, Mishra AD 921–60 and Pandey AD 905–55). The numismatic view is quite different from this. David MacDowall’s seminal study of the coinage of the Śāhi period showed that ‘the legends Sri Spalapati Deva, Sri Vakka Deva, and Sri Sāmanta Deva cannot be names of individual kings but must be titles repeated continuously for a whole range of kings throughout dynasty’ and ‘Samand in al-Biruni’s list is probably a name inferred from the existence of so many coins with [the legend] Sri Sāmantadeva’ (1968, 211).

The appearance of Sāmantadeva and his consort on the reverse of a coin issued by Bhīmadeva suggests a different historicity for Sāmantadeva. It certainly points to the existence of an individual ruler whose name was ‘Sāmantadeva’, as against MacDowall’s inference that al-Biruni simply thought of such a ruler because there were many coins with this titular legend in circulation. It is also perhaps suggestive of the fact that the relationship between Sāmantadeva and Bhīmadeva is closer than what the historians have proposed. As MacDowall’s numismatic sequencing shows, there are typological, metallurgical and metrological connections between a class of the silver ‘bull and horseman’ type coins with the legends ‘Sāmantadeva’ and ‘Bhīmadeva’. The latter succeeded the former and in the immediate aftermath of Bhīmadeva’s reign, the silver currency collapsed to a much more debased coinage. If al-Biruni’s king list is taken to represent a dynastic ‘order’, it follows that at least some of the coins of ‘Kamalu’, the predecessor of Bhīmadeva, might have been issued with the legend ‘Sāmantadeva’. MacDowall also postulated that some coins with the legend ‘Sāmantadeva’ with the letter ‘bhi’ on the reverse, might be early issues of Bhīmadeva, and coins with his own name follow these. It would not be too far-fetched to suggest, therefore, that ‘Sāmantadeva’ was a common title held by Bhīmadeva as well as more than one of his predecessors and the image of ‘Sāmantadeva’ on the gold coin is in fact that of Kamalu/Kamaluka, the father of Bhīmadeva.

The identity of 'Nawalistan' is uncertain and it may have been erroneously engraved by the die-engraver instead of 'Mulk Chawalistan urf Arsah Kamru' which was known to have briefly operated earlier during the same Sultan's rule. The type is not listed in G&G. The adjective 'al-Sikka al-Mubarak' indicates this was a 'blessed coin', probably indicating its commemorative nature, Unlisted in G&G, about extremely fine, extremely rare.

394. (2x)

394. Mughal, Jahangir (AH 1014-1037, 1605-1627 AD), Silver Sultani (Heavy 1/2 Rupee), 6.77 gms, 18.85 mm, Kabul Mint, AH 1014, RY Ahd, Obv: Persian legend "Noor ud din Muhammad Jahangir Badshah Ghazi" and sana 1, at the bottom within a dotted border, Rev: Arabic legend The Kalima Shahada at the top in two lines, "zarb Kabul" with Hijri year (101)5 partially visible, within a dotted border, A fascinating aspect of Jahangir's reign was his experimentation with coins. In addition to their high quality, weight standards, and intricate designs, coins from his period are known in a variety of denominations with interesting names. For heavyweight silver half rupees of high purity, the Sultani denomination was used. The Tuzuk-e-Jahangiri records the following names for fractional denominations; Gold coins of half tola as 'Nurani', meaning 'the light' and quarter tola as 'Riwazi'. The silver coins (sikkas) of 10 tola were named 'Kaukab-i-bakht', meaning 'star of good luck', 5 tola as 'Kaukab-i-sa'd' meaning 'star of auspiciousness', 1 tola as 'Jahangiri', and 'Half Jahangiri as Sultani' meaning 'The Royal'. KM # 139.1, very fine+, very rare.

Conditions of Sale

Please read these Terms of Use ("Terms", "Terms of Use") carefully before using the <http://virasatauctions.com> website (the "Service") operated by Virasat Auctions ("us", "we", or "our").

1. These are the conditions of sale ran and conducted by a licensed auctioneer based in Lucknow. The licensee Virasat Auctions will hereinafter be referred to as "Auctioneer". Placing or making a bid in this listed Auction constitutes acceptance by you and/or your company (the "Bidder") of all the conditions of sale stated within this document. Bidders may also include consignors. A consignor may bid and purchase lots consigned by a consignor as per their individual agreements.

2. The Auctioneer reserves the right to include its own material in any auction sale.

3. A Bidder acknowledges and agrees that any Buyer's Premium or other charges incurred by a Bidder is not payable by the Auctioneer.

4. A Bidder acknowledges that the Auctioneer may have access to information that is not publically available for any and all auction lots. Any claimed conflict of interest or claimed competitive advantage resulting from this information is expressly waived by all participants in any Auction sale.

5. The Buyer for any lot is the Bidder who makes the highest bid accepted by the Auctioneer, and includes the principal of any Bidder acting as an agent. In the event of any dispute arising in an auction sale involving a Bidder or Bidders, the Auctioneer shall have absolute discretion to determine the outcome of any dispute or may decide to withdraw or relist the disputed lot.

6. The auctioneer reserve the right to postpone, rearrange or cancel an auction without notice at its sole discretion. Any individual lot or lots may also be withdrawn by Auctioneer without notice prior to the bidding process being open. Any Bidder accepts that the Auctioneer or Consignor shall not be liable for any costs or damages arising from either the withdrawn of material at the auction or the delay or cancellation of the auction.

7. The Auctioneer reserves the right and has absolute discretion to alter lots whether combining lots, dividing lots or withdrawing lots from the auction process without giving reason. All bidding shall be regulated by the Auctioneer and at their absolute discretion they shall have the right of refusal for any or all bid(s).

8. Any estimate figures for auction lot(s) are provided by the Auctioneer as an expected sale price only. Any listed price is not a representative of any possible reserve price and are published for the benefit of Bidders as a guide only. The Auctioneer reserves the right to reject any bids lower than the lot(s) estimate. Bidders may only bid within or above the estimated sale price for any particular lot(s).

9. Lots may carry a Reserve price. Reserve prices are confidential and Bidders will not be made aware of the reserve associated with any lot(s). The Auctioneer will not sell an item below reserve price or will re-purchase on behalf of the Consignor or Auctioneer. The Auctioneer reserves the right to place bids on behalf of the consignor up to the amount of a reserve price established by the consignor.

10. The Auctioneer shall not be responsible for any default by either buyer or seller or for any action, loss or claim arising in any lot.

11. Any and all item bids will be opened in numerical order. If more than one identical bid is received and represents a winning bid then the winning Bidder will be the earliest received chronologically. The decision of the Auctioneer in identifying the winning Bidder shall be final and at their sole discretion.

12. Only a registered member is allowed to bid in any auction. Each individual auction undertaken by the Auctioneer requires a new registration. Registration for a previous auction does not preclude or automate inclusion in another.

13. The registration process may require your Client ID and/or you may be required to fill a registration form. The registration form will require but may not be limited to your address, telephone number, and signature. After registration you will be allotted a numbered paddle to bid.

14. Any first time Bidder or registrant may be asked to provide references and/or a refundable Security Money Deposit and/or show a government-issued picture ID before the start of the auction, subject to the Auctioneer's sole discretion.

15. Any person submitting bids individually and/or on behalf of a corporation or any other person / persons, agrees to be personally liable for full payment of the invoice. The Auctioneer reserves the right to prevent Bidders from registering or taking part in any auction where previous bills are outstanding. If a Bidder defaults on payment the Auctioneer reserves the right to forfeit the registrants Security Money Deposit and this will not be returned.

16. Bidding commissions for registrants unable to attend the auction in person may be carried out by the Auctioneer without charge and in strict confidence. Any "BUY" commissions will only be accepted, solely at the absolute discretion of the Auctioneer.

17. The Auctioneer shall endeavour to make all efforts possible to enter and execute bids received by E-mail, Fax or by other means. However, the Auctioneer shall not be liable for any errors for incorrectly entered or incorrectly executed bids. Bidders are solely responsible for their bids made through any method including any errors they may make in doing so. The Auctioneer reserves the right to refuse and reject any unsigned bid sheet received.

18. All lots are sold as shown with all faults, imperfections and errors of description. Neither the Auctioneer nor the seller shall give or provide warranty to any buyer in respect of any lot, or be liable for any fault or error contained in a lot description. All statements as to the items sold, whether made in catalogues, during the course of the auction, or otherwise are statements of opinion only. Such statements are not to be taken as representations of fact and Bidders should carry out due diligence as they require. The Auctioneer reserves the right in forming his own opinion and to have the ability to consult and rely upon any expert or authority considered by him reliable. Notwithstanding the aforementioned terms if a winning Bidder finds that any lot should have been wrongly described in any material aspect, the buyer may reject the same. In doing so a Bidder must provide written notice of intention to do so and shall have returned the same item(s) to the Auctioneer within seven (7) days from the day of the sale. Bidders accept that the Auctioneer will not be responsible or liable for any costs, expenses or damages incurred by a lot or its return including, but not limited to, loss of any kind or profit whatsoever.

19. Bidders are advised by the Auctioneer to complete all due diligence and to scrutinize the lots they bid for prior to doing so. All Bidders and Buyers must satisfy themselves as to the accuracy of their purchases at the time of delivery. The Auctioneer cannot be held responsible for any discrepancy with a listing after the item(s) have been removed from their original packing.

20. Each lot shall be at the buyer's risk from the fall of the hammer.

21. Delivery is possible only when full payment has been given. Delivery of lot(s) may be made on the following day after receiving full payment of the purchase price.

22. The Purchase price is defined as the winning bid price plus Buyer's Premium and any applicable taxes. The full price has to be paid by the purchaser. The full and total invoice amount is to be paid by the buyer prior to delivery and within 7 days of the date specified on the invoice. The Auctioneer reserves the right and has sole discretion in charging interest at the rate of 2% per month for any overdue amount. If a bidder defaults on payment the Auctioneer has sole discretion and reserves the right to forfeit the registrants Security Money Deposit and this will not be returned.

23. Payment for lot(s) shall be in Indian Rupees. Payment can be made by cash, cheques / DD drawn on Indian banks or by electronic transfers. The full purchase price shall be paid prior to delivery of the lot. All associated costs for the delivery of lots such as handling, shipping, and insurance will be added to the purchase price. Any Credit card payment will be subject to a 3% surcharge on Master and Visa Cards. Any payment via accepted online payment processors will also be subject to a 3% surcharge but may vary depending on the individual processor.

24. The Auctioneer will not be liable for any lots left for more than seven (7) working days after the date of sale. The Auctioneer reserves the right to relist, re-sell or charge storage for any such lots. Buyers shall not be entitled to remove lots from the auction room during the course of the auction.

25. Export of Antiquities: All Buyers are required to be aware of any legislation regarding the export of antiquities. All Buyers are requested to note that as per the Antiquities and Art Treasures Act, 1972 (Act No. 52 of 1972), items (including coins) over 100 years old, cannot be exported out of India except at the express permission of the Director General, Archaeological Survey of India, Janpath, New Delhi.

26. By bidding in any auction and on any lot(s) a Bidder enters into a legal contract. By doing so a Bidder accepts to honour all his/her conditions of sale and shall be bound by them. These Conditions shall take effect and be construed in accordance with Indian law and are subject to Lucknow Jurisdiction as per the licence of the Auctioneer.

27. The Bidders are required to provide all invoicing details to Virasat Auctions prior to the sale at the time of registering. The Auctioneer reserves the right to reject or exclude Bidders that have not provided these details.

28. The Bidder accepts that price estimate(s) for any lot(s) do not include any packing, shipping, handling or insurance charges. All of the aforementioned will be borne by the buyer. The exact amount of shipping-handling and insurance will be conveyed when the final invoice is prepared and will vary depending on the specifics of each individual lot.

29. The Bidder accepts that any and all duties and taxes as applicable, including GST and/or Local Body will be borne by the buyer.

30. Buyers may choose to have the option to collect any and all of their purchases from the Virasat Auctions office in Lucknow after the transfer of full payment is completed.

31. Virasat Auctions reserves the right to publish / announce the names of any Bidders individual or otherwise that default on any payment. Publication can be made at the sole discretion of the Auctioneer on their website and at appropriate places. Such action protects the integrity of the Auctioneer and the industry as a whole. The Auctioneer will not be liable or responsible for any losses whether financial or otherwise resulting from a Bidder failing to pay or the following publication of name.

32. The auction is conducted in Indian Rupees unless otherwise detailed in the auction listing.

These Terms shall be governed and construed in accordance with the laws of India, without regard to its conflict of law provisions.
